MUCH ANXIETY OVER SELECTION OF TEXT BOOKS

Reported That Some Books Are Not Fair to North Carolina.

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, July 24.—The keenest sort of interest is developing on the part of parents as well as educators in the impending adoption of the text books that are to be required to be used in the public schools of the state during the next five years, the examination of books for adoption being now in progress by the sub-text-book commission, with the actual work of final adoption less than two weeks off. Possibly the greatest anxiety is being manifested as to the share of prominence that is given to accurate information regarding North Carolina in the readers, the histories and kindred books that are finally adopted by the commission. This State has suffered so much from lack of representation and from misleading information that there is a deep-seated anxiety in this regard.

In a notable and animated discussion of this question it was asserted that there is now being exploited in North Carolina a set of geographies that may be involved in the work of adoption that have in the elementary volume over three hundred and fifty pictures without a single one of them being credited in North Carolina while the advanced book has nearly six hundred illustrations without a single one bearing a North Carolina name.

It is also declared that in the historic treatment of the United States in the formation of the Union contains a sneak blow at North Carolina and the South that would have the ultimate effect of imbusing the children with the idea that their fathers who fought in the Confederate army were rebels. This was illustrated by a quotation from the elementary book, page 79, which reads: "In less than three hundred years after the country was discovered thirteen colonies had been settled along the Atlantic Coast, all belonging to England, which is one of the most important counties of Europe. In 1776 these colonies began the War of the Revolution to become a new nation." This it was pointed out, is a dangerous error in that the men who made North Carolina's history glorious never adopted the teaching that the war of the Revolution was begun and fought for the establishment of a "new nation," but solely and alone for the freedom and independence of the sovereign states. That is a mighty little word declared this anxious critic, but used in this connection and in that manner it is a sneak. The author, he declared, could surely have had nothing in common with the people of North Carolina. And while he would therefore regard this of minor importance, our people never regarded these United States "a nation until after the Civil War of 1860-65, and are not very loud on it now for they have a profound respect for the idea of states' rights. Just how a man could make a geography," said he, "and see nothing in North Carolina worthy of illustration in it seems a puzzle—he probably has never been in the State."

GOVERNOR IS PREPARING A SECOND REPLY

News and Observer Editorial Sunday Called Forth Another Statement.

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, July 24.—Governor Kitchin is preparing a reply to the seven column editorial criticism the Raleigh morning paper gave him Sunday in reply to the lengthy card of the Governor, refuting the criticisms of Misenheimer and Lockhart and Editor Daniels a week ago. The Governor will be very brief this time, one of the principal features being the insistance, in spite of the denials of Editor Daniels, that the attack on the Governor just at this time is to affect the candidacy of the Governor for the Senate. He will also dwell with still more emphasis upon the fact that he is not expected and would not have the moral or constitutional right to use his executive office for the coercion of the legislative branch of the government and insisting that he has done all that he could do to curb the trusts.

CHARGES

Of Fraud in Alaska Coal Case Branded as False by Wickersham.

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 24.—Attorney General Wickersham today branded as false the charges of Delegate Wickersham, of Alaska, that Attorney General Wickersham had shielded Alaskan criminals and had allowed the statute of limitatins to run in the coal contract fraud cases. These and other disclaimers were were made before the House committee on the judiciary in answer to the allegations of Delegate Wickersham. It was pointed out by a member of the committee that H. J. Douglas had made an affidavit to show a conspiracy had been entered into to get coal to the government forts in Alaska.

The attorney general and Delegate Wickersham exchanged sharp remarks. Delegate Wickersham said that he was there to make good his statement when the attorney general demanded proof of his allegations. Delegate Wickersham stated that it would require several days for him to prepare his evidence and the committee adjourned to allow him to get the facts in the case in shape to present them to the committee when it meets again.

BINFORD

Girl Declares She is Willing to Die For Henry Clay Beattie

Special to Telegram.

Richmond, July 24.—No new developments in the case against Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., and the others who have become involved in the Beattie murder case were recorded tonight. The police are working along the theories they have already developed, trying to make more conclusive the web of circumstantial evidence they have woven around Henry Clay Beattie as the murderer of his wife on the lonely auto pike a week ago. In an interview this evening with Miss Beulah Binford, Beattie's mysterious friend, she is quoted as saying "I would swear to anything to save Henry Beattie from execution. I love him more than anybody in the world."

Beattie, Miss Binford and Paul Beattie, a cousin of the alleged slayer, are all locked up. The Binford girl is not worried about herself, but is much concerned over the fate of Beattie. She told the police she would gladly swear that she committed the murder if it would clear Henry.

The police are forging a chain of circumstantial evidence out of the statement of Paul Beattie and the Binford girl to prove that Beattie planned the wife murder a week before he had the opportunity to accomplish it. Then, say the police, he got the gun from Paul Beattie and taking it to a lonely spot on the road hid it behind a tree. The rest of the story, the police say, is simply a reiteration of the theory they have always adhered to.

Beattie's father called upon him in his cell today but the interview was kept a secret. Newspaper men were not allowed to interview the father while in the jail and when he passed out he refused to say anything for publication.

"Never Had a Chance."

Richmond, Va., July 24.—"I never had a chance, not even when I was a little girl. I have always been shoved down for when I tried to work someone always dragged up my past. I wish I was dead. I have nothing to live for." Thus sobbed Beulah Binford, the central figure in the Beattie murder case, who is the motive for the crime as well as being a witness, as she lay on a cot in the Henrico county jail unable to give bond, pleading for the life of the man she loves.

Paul Beattie, who is also being held as a witness, when his brother called upon him this morning, asked his brother to see the Binford girl and tell her to keep up her nerve and not desert him in his hour of need.

HINES

Causes Sensation by Saying Boutelle Said Taft Wanted Lorimer Elected.

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 24.—Edward Hines, of Chicago, caused a sensation today by testifying before the Senate Lorimer committee that Representative Henry S. Boutell, of Illinois, now American minister to Switzerland, told him that President Taft regarded Lorimer as an acceptable senatorial candidate and was anxious to have him elected and would be very glad to assist in his election.

Today's session of the committee began with Attorney Haney, counsel for Senator Lorimer, questioning Hines.

Suddenly, at the instance of his counsel, Mr. Hines produced a sheet of paper, without letter head and without signature or date, but which Mr. Hines said was in Mr. Boutell's handwriting. This little sheet contained these words:

"I should like to have the senator know who was the only man in Washing who went to the president in his behalf and being off (sic) the goods."

Mr. Hines declared that the senator referred to was Senator Lorimer and that his election to the Senate was the subject of the note. The witness explained that he was sure of his explanation because a little while after he got the note from Mr. Boutell he had a conveyation with him which cleared up the matter. Mr. Hines declared that in this conversation Mr. Boutell said he had gone to see President Taft and had told him that Lorimer seemed to be the only man upon whom the factions could unite. Mr. Hines continued:

"Mr. Boutell said that after he told the President of Lorimer's capabilities and of the ability of the factions to unite on him, he (the president) said that he was very anxious to have a senator elected from Illinois and that Mr. Lorimer was very acceptable to him and that he would do all he could to assist in electing him."

Mr. Hines testified that Boutell's talk with the President was before the election of Lorimer. He said in reference to a question that he had never threatened any senator if he did not vote for Lorimer. He said that he had done a great deal of lobbying for Lorimer in Washington, but it was all done above board and he had not used any threats.

MR. ARBUCKLE DEPLORES THE SUGAR WAR

Says It Is Blot on Clean Business Competition of the Country.

Special to Telegram.

New York, July 24.—"I never bent the pregnant hinges of the knee in my dealings with Havemeyer that thrift might follow fawning," said John Arbuckle today to Representatives Garrett and Madison, the sub-committee of the congressional committee that is investigating the sugar trust. The subcommittee had journeyed to the merchant's summer home at Near Platz in the Catskills to take his testimony. They learned that Mr. Arbuckle had been compelled to go to bed, bnt he showed, mentally, no effects of illness. "The sugar industry is the worst conducted of any line of business in the United States. There had been more waste in it than in anything I know anything about," he said. Mr. Arbuckle then reviewed the sugar trade and styled Havemeyer as a baron in the sugar industry. He also spoke of the war carried on by refineries against independent companies and said it was a black blot on clean business competition in the country.

CONSTANTINOPLE FIRE WORK OF INCENDIARIANS.

Special to Telegram.

Constantinople, July 24.—The conflagration which started yesterday afternoon continued until three this morning when the flames were under control, because no further fuel was in their path. It is believed that the present fire is the work of political incendiarians, which broke out simultaneously at several places in Stambul, the ancient city, while the people were celebrating the third anniversary of constitutional government. A later dispatch says the fire has broken out again, but by dynamiting rows of houses soldiers and civilians have gotten it under control. The fire apparratus was totally inadequate.

THE GOOD ROADS TRAIN WILL ARRIVE THIS AFTERNOON

Free Lecture on Road Construction, Also Public Demonstration.

The Southern Railway's Good Roads train will arrive in the city this afternoon about 2 o'clock from Sanford and will remain in the city all the afternoon. There are three cars in the train, two being devoted to carrying for exhibition working models of road building machinery, operated by electricity. During the stay in this city demonstrations will be given at the train.

This afternoon from 5 to 6 o'clock in the Bijou theatre, the use of which was kindly donated by the management, a stereopticon lecture will be given by one of the experts accompanying the train. The lecture will be free to the public and will no doubt be largely attended as interesting and instructive views of roads will be shown and the lecture will be by an expert from the United States Department of Agriculture.

It was first intended for the lecture to be given here at night, but it was decided to have it in the afternoon in order to have as many farmers as possible attend the lecture, this being impracticable if the lecture were given at night. In view of the fact that the attendance will no doubt tax the capacity of the theatre boys under 18 years of age will not be admitted.

This train is traveling all over the state for the purpose of arousing interest in good roads and in showing the people how roads can be built at the minimum cost. Everywhere large and interested crowds have gathered to witness the demonstrations and attend the illustrated lectures and at every place the crowds were enthusiastic. While Guilford has good roads it also has some bad ones and local enthusiasts hope that a large number will be on hand this afternoon and profit by the knowledge of those who have devoted much time and attention to the construction of good roads.

THE RECKLESSNESS OF AUTOMOBILISTS.

One of the important problems confronting the country at present is the question of controling the speed of automobiles and of dealing with the recklessness of many of those who drive the machines. If men who drive automobiles recklessly did so to the possible injury or death of nobody but themselves, the public would feel like manifesting less interest in the problem but when the limbs and lives of all the people who do not ride in automobiles are endangered, the matter becomes one of most vital consequence to the non-speeding public.

Automobiling undoubtedly creates in the minds of many of those who drive the machines and who ride in them contempt for people who are not riding in automobiles and for the rights of pedestrians, as well as contempt of and disregard for the laws enacted to protect the rights and lives of the masses. These facts are matters of daily note and have been commented upon thousands of times in the newspapers and by individuals; but the automobilists continue to speed and to wound and kill those who ride in their machines, in other machines, and those who are compelled to walk or drive upon the streets and highways.

What is to be done to secure the safety of the public, in the first place; and of the reckless automobilists in the second place? While the latter question may appear to deal with a phase of the matter which does not concern the public in general, it is difficult for a thoughtful man and good citizen to believe that the country ought to allow the men who drive automobiles to commit suicide, even if no lives other than their own are endangered or lost. That stringent measures will have to be taken, and should be taken throughout the country at once, to stop the mad career of the speeders and joy riders, is evident. The entire country is stirred from day to day by news of automobile accidents and news of the maiming or killing of innocent victims of the speed maniacs. An especially brutal incident, resulting in the death of a young man in Baltimore, moves the Sun of that city to the following comment upon this unfortunate feature of modern civilization. The Sun says:

"Again comes an illustration of the danger and the heartless brutality of the automobile speeder. The man killed on Belvidere avenue in the early hours of this morning was only 22 years old; the interests and the opportunities of life were all ahead of him. He was caught in the clutches of one of these Juggernauts, battered, mangled, dragged 50 feet along the road and then hurled to the side—and the men in the machine were not sufficiently interested to stop and see what had happened.

"What psychologist can explain the recklessness, the carelssness and the deadening of the conscience bred of the automobile? It is astounding and sickening. This Beattie case, the news of which fills the papers—there is quite possibly something more than a coincidence in the fact that that killing took place in the automobile. The callousness, the brutality, the bravado, apparent in that case seem to be part of the natural equipment of the joy rider and the speeder.

"It is difficult to say what is the complete remedy for this monstrous evil, but one thing is certain: There should be the most vigorous and stringent enforcement of the laws that exist. And where manslaughter is committed neither courts nor juries should hold any improper sympathy for those whose recklessness has caused death. This matter has certainly been sufficiently debated. Every man who owns a motorcar knows what risks he takes when he drives recklessly or breaks the speed law limit. Morally, he is responsible for any deaths that he causes when he violates the law, and we think that he should be legally responsible also. And no mercy should be shown the individual who has struck down a helpless victim, speeds on and leaves him to his fate."

THE SOUTHERN'S GOOD ROADS TRAIN.

The Southern Railway's "Good Roads Train" will arrive in Greensboro this afternoon. This is the train which has already traveled through a large part of the South and which yet has a long journey ahead in traversing other sections of this State and adjoining States. The tour of this train is designed by the Southern Railway as an educational feature in the interest of road improvement and to assist the good roads advocates of the South in stirring up enthusiasm for improved highways. The train is loaded down with models of improved road working and road building machinery and kindred exhibits and carries government road experts and others, who are able to explain the uses of the machinery and to instruct the people in road building. This afternoon from five to six o'clock, at the Bijou Theatre, which has been placed at the disposal of the Greensboro Chamber of Commerce for this purpose, there will be given an illustrated lecture by one of the good roads experts accompanying the Southern's party. All persons over eighteen years of age are invited to be present and hear this lecture.

The Southern Railway is doing a practical work to help along the good roads campaign in the South with this "Good Roads Train." It will prove an educational force and stimulate interest in the good roads movement, and to that extent will forward the very general campaign in the South for road improvement and the construction of modern highways. It will cost the Southern a considerable sum of money to send this train on this long trip through the South, but it will not cost the people of the sections traversed anything to take advantage of the opportunity offered to see the train and the exhibits and to hear experts discuss the great and important subject of highway construction. Therefore, all who can do so should visit the train and be at the Bijou Theatre this afternoon to attend the lecture.

WINSTON WANTS A POSTOFFICE BUILDING.

Winston is kicking because the United States government proposes to spend less than $200,000 in erecting a federal building in that city. Winston wants a postoffice building to cost a million dollars. The government would be justified in spending a large sum of money for a federal building in Winston, in view of the revenue collected there, derived principally from the tobacco business; and while it would not be reasonable or buisness-like to ask for a large appropriation for a fine building merely to gratify the pride of the people of Winston, it is a noticeable fact that in growing towns the government frequently makes the mistake of erecting postoffice buildings for present needs and without considering the future. Money can be saved and the public interests best served by planning federal buildings with an eye to the future. Many cities outgrow their public buildings in a decade, which necessitates the construction of a new building and the sacrifice of the old building, with consequent loss to the government.

Greensboro is magnanimous to the extent of wishing Winston success in the campaign for an adequate and elegant postoffice building. Greensboro needs such a building; and if Winston gets a million dollar postoffice, this city will try for one costing a million and a half.

Greenville Piedmont wants to know the cause of the trouble in Hayti. Haven't heard definitely, but it is probably the same thing that causes most of the political fights in this country—the outs want to get in.

Great Northern is to spend $25,000,000 for railroad development in Oregon, while Erie has ordered $7,000,000 worth of equipment. Railroads seem to be recovering rapidly from the attack of ague following the freight rate decision.

It is said that New Jersey cities rejected commission government becauses it is favored by Governor Wilson. The real reason, however, is that commission government is opposed by the politicians and office holders of those New Jersey cities and, unfortunately for the cities alluded to, the politicians appear to be able to control their voting.

Wilmington's trouble with the city commission and the movement to recall the commissioners directs attention to the absence of trouble in Greensboro. The commission is making good here and there is reason to believe it will continue to do so. The movement for recall in Wilmington appears to have originated among the people who want an "open" town and it is doubtful if it will succeed in its purpose to have the commissioners removed.

COINING NORTH CAROLINA GOLD AT RUTHERFORD.

"Give us something about the Bechtlers. I would like to know myself and besides, it would be of interest to the general public." This remark of a friend suggests this article.

Away back in the forties and prior to the discovery of gold in California in '49 the gold mines of North Carolina attracted attention. There was mining for gold in Burke, Rutherford, Mecklenburg, Rowan, Cabarrus and perhaps one or two other counties. In north Georgia also, especially around Dalonega, there were much activity in the search for gold. Aside from these localities, so far as I know, there was no other section in the United States in which gold was found at that time.

Attracted to the mines in Rutherford, there came two Germans, Augustus and Christopher Bechtler. They engaged in mining but soon abandoned the search for gold and established a mint for its coinage in the town of Rutherfordton. Augustus seems to have been the leader in this. About him I have but an indistinct recolection, only remembering that he was quite large and fine-looking.

He was a jolly Dutchman, fond of company and of his gun and dogs, and never failed to kill a partridge "on the wing." Not very long after the establishment of their mint, Augustus Bechtler died. The business was carried on by Christopher for quite a number of years. Of him I have a very distinct remembrance. Like his brother, he was very large. He had a bushy head, heavy eyebrows and dark complexion.

But, unlike his brother, Augustus, he seemed to be a recluse, keeping off the street and avoiding any gathering of the people. The mint or place where he worked was a room in his dwelling. I never heard of any one who witnessed his process of coining the crude gold into beautiful coins. This was, as I think a secret, which he well guarded. He bought the gold dust from those who got it by the crude process of panning.

Much of this dust was taken in by merchants, most of which found its way to Bechtler's mint. It must not be supposed from the scarcity of the Bechtler coin at the present day that there was only a few hundred dollars that got into circulation. I remember well, being a lad behind the counter, that it was the principal currency in Rutherford, and I think of the surrounding counties. In my opinion its circulation ran up into sever hundred thousand.

The Bechtler coin was pure gold, and without alloy and its weight was slightly in excess of the legal tender. How did it all so suddenly disappear? Did shrewd parties gather it up and have it re-coined at a profit? Who knows? Chistopher Bechtler had the confidence of the people and the fact that he handled so much gold and died a poor man should be a monument to his honesty.—Lawson Eaves in Shelby Highlander.

COMING TO SEE GOOD ROADS.

Catawba county is determined to bring about some effective result in her efforts to secure good roads. The Hickory Chamber of Commerce and the Newton Boosters' Club have agreed to secure a special train to run from Hickory and Newton to Greensboro, and propose to take 300 or more of the Catawba county citizens to Guilford county and show them what it means to have good roads.—Concord Tribune.

MATTAMOSKEET LAKE DRAINAGE GREAT ENGINEERING PROJECT

Asheville, July 24.—J. P. Kerr, who spent the past several months in Hyde county, near Mattamuskeet Lake, is at home for a few weeks' stay. Mr. Kerr is one of those interested in the Southern Land Reclamation company, which purposes draining the great lake and converting the 50,000 acres of the lake bed into farm land. Mr. Kerr talked interesting of the plans for the draining of the lake and the preliminary work that has been going on for some time. The actual work of draining the lake will not, however, commence until after the Supreme court has passed upon an injunction having been sued to prevent the company from selling as great an amount as $500.000 worth of bonds. The Supreme court, however, will meet August 28, and it is expected that immediately the decision of the lower court in dissolving the injunction will be affirmed.

The lake that is to be drained covers an area of 50,000 acres when the water is at its heighth. There has been a great drought in that section this summer, however, and Mr. Kerr says the body of water is now smaller than for many years. Just before leaving Hyde county Mr. Keer went to the lake and drove one and one-half miles across the lake bed, which was perfectly dry. He says that the soil is perhaps the richest in the world. It is like a chocolate cake, a layer of dark soil, then a layer the shade of brown and then darker and so on. This extends to a depth of from two and one-half to five feet. It is believed that once the lake is drained the finest truck growing land in the south, if not in the world, will be reclaimed. Some idea of the value of the lake bed of 50,000 acres when once reclaimed for truck growing purposes may be had when figured at even a minimum price of $100 per acre. That would make the land that the company is going to reclaim worth $5,000,000. But the land will be worth more than that.

The Southern Land Reclamation company is a pioneer in the work undertaken. This is brought out forcibly when it is remembered that there is but one 54-inch centrifugal pump in the United States, and that is used by the government, whereas the Mattamuskeet Lake will be drained with eight 60-inch centrifugal pumps. These eight pumps will have a capacity of 15,000 gallons per second, or 54,000,0000 gallons per hour. The pumping station will be located on the Pamlico sound side of the lake and a great canal cut from the lake to the sound, into which the water will be sent.

Mr. Kerr said that the dredging contract would probably be let within the next few days. The contract price will be somewhere in the neighborhood of $175,000, while the pumping contract will approximate the same figure.

Mr. Keer is enthusiastic over the undertaking and feels satisfied that the venture will result successfully and that the bed of the great lake will, within a comparatively short time, be producing immense quantities of food stuffs. When the lake is drained, drainage canals will be cut at distances across the lake bed and the water from these small canals will empty into a larger canal and finally be pumped over a ten or twelve foot head at the pumping station into the big canal leading to Pamlico sound.

JOHNSTON COUNTY PEOPLE GREATLY INTERESTED IN ROADS

Smithfield, July 24. — The lay out of the great Central Highway from Beaufort harbor to the Tennessee line by the Trustees has created quite an interest in good roads all over the state. But nowhere has it done more than here in Johnston county. Our people in every section are discussing ways and means of bettering the condition of their highways.

Ingram township is circulating a petition for a call for an election upon the question of special tax to improve its roads.

Boone Hill and Beulah will soon follow. Both townships seem to be very much interested.

On Wednesday, July 26, at Holt's Mill on the line of the great Central Highway, near Princeton, Boone Hill will give a barbucue and basket picnic in the interest of good roads, at which place Dr. A. Cheatham, of Durham, Edward E. Brittin, of Raleigh, and James A. Wellons, of Smithfield, will make addresses on this live subject.

On Friday, July 28, at Old Beulah, near Kenly, the people of Beulah township will give a basket picnic and barbecue. George C. Royall, of Goldsboro and Prof. A. Vermont, of Smithfield, will deliver good roads speeches.

W. S. Morton, the civil engineer, is surveying the Central Highway across Cleveland township this week, and the work of grading has already begun. Our people are in earnest about this matter and we predict that in the near future Johnston county will be a network of good roads from one side to the other.

Honest Medicines Versus Fakes.

President Taft's recent message suggesting an amendment to the Pure Food and Drugs law in its relation to Prepared Medicines, does not refer to such standard medicines as Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and Foley's Kidney Pills, both of which are true medicines carefully compounded of ingredients whose medicinal qualities are recognized by the medical profession itself as the best known remedial agents for the diseases they are intended to counteract. For over three decades Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has been a standard remedy for coughs, colds and affections of the throat, chest and lungs for children and for grown persons, and it retains today its pre-eminence above all other preparations of its kind. Foley Kidney Pills are equally effective and meritorious. Howard Gardner.

THE TELEGRAM'S LETTER FROM THE METROPOLIS

By ROBERT LEE CARTER.
Special to Telegram.

New York, July 24.—New York is begining to wonder if it ever will get its transit problem solved. That it needs to be solved and quickly will not be questioned, by any one who has to travel about the city much but the city officials wrangle with the transportation companies week after week and New Yorkers bid fair to become a race which can vie with the monkeys in the matter of long arms, by reason of hanging to straps while between home and work. As the wranglers on both sides generally have their own autos, this phase of the question does not appeal to them.

The feeling is growing that if the existing companies will not build and operate the new transit lines, which are urgently needed, the city had best go ahead and do it itself. A statement recently issued by the Comptroller shows that the city has now a borrowing capacity of $21,500,000 available for transit purposes.

Col. Roosevelt's position that from now on he wishes to avoid making any speeches he can possibly avoid is causing a good deal of speculation.

There is a strong feeling that the Colonel has his eye on the Republican nomination for 1916. It is said by those who hold this view that he will support President Taft actively this year and then go after the nomination five years hence with all the vigor of which he is caapable. It may be so.

The splendid new club house of the Elks, on West Forty-Third street has been opened. One hundred feet square and twelve floors high, with a roof garden, the edifice has the accommodations of the most modern hotels, and the lodgeroom, which becomes a ballroom for the Elk festivities, is beautiful. Lodge No. 1, of New York, has three thousand members, and they have built the clubhouse at an expense of $1,250,000, without asking outside assistance. It was hoped that the dedication would be made memorable by the election of Arthur C. Moreland, a New Yorker, as Grand Exalted Ruled of the Elks. Brother Moreland has been the Ruler of lodges in San Francisco and New York, Grand Secretary and chairman of important committees, and he is the author of the funeral ritual and the installation and dedicatory services and the originator of the membership card and the Flag on the Altar.

"The South has been long awake to its advantages and possibilities in the commercial world but now it is starting a campaign that will awaken the whole country to realization of its natural wealth and possible development," is the opinion of A. L. Sheehan, of the firm of Sheehan & Kennedy, cotton exporters, of Atlanta, Georgia.

"The reputed shrewdness of the Yankee seems to have been inculcated into the Southern mind, and there is today a rising, rampant movement to bring capital into the South, open vast fields that have lain dormant since 'before the war,' and, especially, to establish manufacturing centers that will handle the output of those fields.

"Millions of bales of cotton are exported every year to reap profits for European manufacturers. With the industrial movement now actively on, it is intended to keep those profits at home, or, at least, to increase the profits of the producer by exciting a healthy competition that can result only in an increase of general prosperity.

"A dozen cities have formed trades organizations to systemize the work, and these are to be joined in one central combination that will control local and suggest general plans for advertising the South, and to interest capitalists and investors in industrial possibilities.

"Sugar and rice growing will be raised to the income-producing output of cotton, and there are many sections practically useless for any other agricultural attempts that are ideal for rice cultivation. A vast geographical change is in sight, and in a few years the damp swamps of the lowlands will be turned into broad rice fields."

"California has not dropped out of the running in the world's mining, though you do not hear of her mines in the lusty boom fashion of the days that followed the discoveries of '49," declares Mr. J. C. Thompson, of San Francisco.

"Mining in our State is done quietly, and even people of the State hear little about it.

"Last year California ranked first in the world's production of gold, and the placer operations are greater every year. Up in the Feather river district the largest dredges in the world are working through miles and miles of what formerly were orchards. The old bed of the river was covered with loam, and the early prospectors passed over this to work the newer and less rich channels.

"Mining always will prosper, because people will take a chance. They put money into something they know nothing about, where if you offered them a gilt-edged commercial proposition, they would refuse to invest. People in the East have not yet realized that they haven't much chance in the mining schemes they are offered stock in. There is plenty of local capital to work the good things, and it is only those that the men on the ground turn down that are floated in the East. I have spent a good many years in the mining business, and I have found that to be true in nearly every instance.

"The new San Francisco is a wonderful city, and the best evidence of its firm rebuilding was in the experience of the earthquake shocks a few years ago. Scarcely any damage was done, and if tremors come again there will be less fear of panic."

"When congress passed the bill making a national park on the summit of the Cascade mountains in southern Oregon including Crater Lake, it did a big thing for the people of that part of the country," says R. H. Brigham, of Klamath, Oregon.

"Following the passage of the bill by congress, an agitation was begun for the building of a boulevad from Medford, Oregon, to the lake, and this is now assured. It was the intention to build a stone road suitable for carriages and automobiles, but after government officials had visited the lake, it was proposed that a much more substantial road be built, whereupon the State of Oregon appropriated $100,000, Jackson county $50,000 Klamath county $50,000 and the citizens an equal amount. It also is planned to construct an electric road to the lake, with adequate service for tourists. The proposed road will be 85 miles long, and besides serving tourists it will tap the immense timber belts through which it will pass."

"Seattle, Wash., is destined to become one of the great cities of the world," declares Thomas W. Shackleford, a lawyer, of that city. "It is the gateway to Alaska, and for that reason, if for no other, is bound to become an important distributing point and railway center. The lull in the development of Alaska, due in a large measure to politics, has had its effect on Seattle, and the city has not made the progress that was expected folowing the fair, which was a big success and attracted great crowds."

MUNICIPAL COURT.

A bountiful supply of "booze" which was partaken of freely by the thirsty, furnished the docket for Municipal court yesterday morning. A number of cases were on trial in each one of which whiskey was the prime factor that had landed the defendant in prison. Judge Bure from the bench stated his shame that such a docket should face him in this strict prohibition town.

W. L. Jones, Ben Womble and Joe Holt, all white men, were convicted on the charge of drunk and disorderly. A fine of $7.50 and the costs was imposed upon each.

Harry Nolan, white, was fined $10 plus the costs for drunkenness and assault.

John Hines, a young negro who by his apearance in court forfeited a bond of $100 given recently to insure his good behavior, was proven guilty of being drunk and disorderly, and being an old offender, he was given $10 and costs.

Branson McIver and Marie Jones, a young negro couple, faced two charges, for an affray and being drunk and disorderly. The pair had a merry scrap in the small hours of Sunday morning when both had been drinking. The woman was rather badly choked by her larger opponent, but she ingeniously explained the presence of four heavy scars on her neck by saying that a pin had scratched one side and the chain at the well had slipped and imprinted the other wounds. The judge taxed each with the costs in the case for affray and imposed a fine of $10 and the costs upon them for the same old charge of drunk and disorderly.

"BIG BUSINESS" SHOWS SIGNS OF IMPROVEMENT

Business Promises Well for Autumn—Wall Street Speculation Remains Dull — Standard Oil Company Preparing to Obey the Court's Decision.

By PRESTON C. ADAMS.
Special to Telegram.

New York, July 24.—Already "big business" is showing evidences of improvement, which means a prosperous season when the thermometer begins to drop.

The great industrial corporations like United States Steel, General Electric, Standard Oil, Amalgamated Copper, International Harvester company, to say nothing of the other great trussts which practically control the manufacturing business of the country are in strong business positions. It is true some of them are at odds with Uncle Sam, but these troubles have nothing to do with the manufacture and sale of goods and are therefore of more interest to Wall street than to the ordinary man.

No matter what plans for reorganization may be carried out to meet the requirements of the law, the factories will turn out goods and they will be sold. In fact, the goods are being turned out and sold in very satisfactory volume.

There is, of course, still some uncertainty about crops, but on the whole the situation all over the country is promising. With big crops and satisfactory manufacturing conditions, the railroads are bound to do big business.

So it may be said with confidence the future holds great promise for business.

This does not apply to the stock market harvest. Every conceivable conjecture has been indulged in by Wall street regarding the reasons for the absence of the public from the stock market.

Here is an explanation from a "shorn lamb," which looks very much as though it really explained:

"It is not that he (the lamb) is 'sore' because of such losses as he may have encountered, for he is perfectly willing to take his chances at a gambling game, if he feels that he is getting a 'square deal.' It is the conviction, borne home to him by Hocking Valley, Chicago & Alton, Third Avenue, and other deals, that he is going up against stacked cards in any speculation in Wall street; and experience has taught him that it is not wise to tackle the same shell game twice. Rightly or wrongly, he has comprehended all Wall Street in this condemnation, and it avails not to assure him that the standard of honor is high in that downtown canon in New York, and that the brokers are generally men of character and standing. He remembers, unfortunately, that some of the 'wizards' whom Wall street loved to honor were men of questionable principles and piratical methows, to him the lamb in Wall street has no other mission save to be fleeced. This is the real reason why the public have not been in the market, despite frantic efforts to persuade them; for surely the snare is spread in vain in the sight of the bird. Until Wall Street regains in his estimation its true purpose of the great exchange mart of the country, where natural conditions and not manipulative forces are the dominant feature, the ordinary man is content to let its devotees prey upon each other for their living."

That there is lots of truth in this may not be gainsaid.

At the offices of the Standard Oil company it is said that a statement of any kind regarding the reorganization of the company will not likely be made for a month or more. Plans for the full compliance with the decree of the Supreme court are being worked out, and it is possible that no official announcements will be made before the distribution of the stocks of the separate companies to the stockholders of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey is begun.

It is pointed out that there is nothing left to be said after the official statement of counsel the day following the decision, that the company would obey the decree of the court and that all the companies embraced in the decree would carry on business under direction of their own officers and through their own corporate organizations.

When the stock of the companies affected by the decree is distributed it is likely that detailed financial statements of all those companies will be sent to stockholders. In that way they can form an idea of the value of their separate holdings.

John W. Gates has not been a dominant factor in the stock market for time, but it is doubtful if the serious illness of any other man in high finance would have been followed with as sympathetic a feeling as has that of Mr. Gates.

John W. Gates is really a typical American—something between the frontiersman and the finished business man the East. He started as a drummer, and he was always a wonderful salesman. He could sell anything. He began to make wire in a small way, and to sell it on the road. When he worked up a business he sold the plant, built another and followed the same course. He formed the American Steel & Wire company, gave it a high standing in the trade, and sold it out to the Steel corporation, of which it has since become the most important subsidiary, with the single exception of the Carnegie Steel company.

Wall Street laughed at John W. Gates' foibles, but recognized his good nature. He made any number of friends—made them on the first meeting. When first you met him he called you by your first name, and gave you several tips on the market, in every one of which he firmly believed. If they did not always pan out it was no fault of his. He was indiscreet in doing such promiscuous favors, for he could not keep track of them all, and, unlike many others, was unable to express regret afterwards if his information had gone wrong. He had simply forgotten all about it. But that was no fault of the heart. John W. Gates has a heart as big as a bushel basket, and there is no false bottom in it.

Thirty years ago the United States had 92,000 miles of railroad; today it has 240,000 miles. The capital stock then was $2,709,000,000; now it is $8,380,000,000. The bonded debt has risen from $2,530,000,000 to $9,600,000,000. The aggregate capitalization, which then was $5,402,000,000, is now $18,890,000,000, or $78,714 per mile, against $58,634 in 1880. The dividends paid have been poor. Up to 1887 they were above 2 per cent., but from 1888 to 1900 they were between 1 1-2 per cent. and 2 per cent. Since then there has been improvement, though 3 3-4 per cent. has never been quite reached. The average rate received for carrying a ton of freight one mile was 1.225 cents in 1883, as contrasted with only 0.753 cents in 1910.

FOR THE BREAKFAST TABLE

Almond Bread Will Be Fourd an Excellent Substitute for Time-Honored Coffee Cake.

Two and a half cups of flour, one and a half cups of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a quarter teaspoonful of salt and six well-beaten eggs should be mixed into a soft dough. Add then a quarter of a pound of sweet almonds, blanched and washed, but not cut. Lastly, work in one and one-quarter glassfuls of the best salad oil. Knead the dough faithfully. Do not have it too stiff. Flour the kneading board well. Cut the dough into pieces about as large as a medium-sized potato, and roll these on the board into lengths. These should extend from one side of the baking pan to the other. Flour—not grease—the pan. Bake in a brisk oven to a light brown. As soon as the pan is removed from the oven, cut the strips into two or into four inch pieces. If this is not done at once while the almonds are soft, you cannot cut the rolls neatly.

The recipe allows for five dozen pieces of almond bread. You may make half the quantity if you like.

The oil used as shortening is not tasted at all in the bread. You may keep it a long time without finding it soggy or anything but crisp and good.

CITY ASKS COUNTY TO HELP BUILD MACADAM STREETS

What action the County Commissioners will take regarding the request of the City Commisioners for macadam work to be done inside the city is a matter of conjecture. However, it is not believed that in event the county is favorable to the request for work to be done inside the city that all the streets will be macadamized that the city wants improved. It is possible that one or more of the streets will be improved in order to allow the people using these thoroughfares good roads direct to the heart of the city.

Last year the city of Greensboro paid into the county road fund the sum of $11,000, not one cent of which was expended on the streets of the city. The total amount paid into the county road fund was $28,093, Greensboro paying about 40 per cent of the entire amount. Of the remainder the city of High Point paid the sum of $2,500, none of which was spent inside High Point. Now both cities are asking that the county help to build some streets, saying that it is only fair that a portion of the money paid by the city be used inside its corporate limits. As this has been going on for years it can be seen that Greensboro and High Point have paid half the cost of the road improvement in the county.

It may be contended by the commissioners that the people of Greensboro and High Point use the roads they helped to improve and are thus getting value received. This is in a measure true, but it should also be stated that the people of the country use the streets of the two cities. In fact more than the people of the cities use the country roads. Only about 20 per cent of the people living in Greensboro ever travel on a road outside the city, while more than 90 per cent of the country people use the streets, this being shown to prove that any money expended on the streets would benefit the country people more than the improvement of a road in the country would benefit the city people.

Again, as will be agreed to by all, both city and country must stand together, for without a well developed country there can be no large Greensboro and without a growing, prospering Greensboro the country surrounding will be hampered. At present the roads leading into Greensboro, in most cases, stop at the city limits and the remainder of the way to the center of the city is almost impassable in bad weather. Greensboro has not the resources that the county has, and inasmuch as Greensboro contributes something like 40 per cent of the county's resources, the city feels that it is nothing but fair that some of these resources should be spent innside Greensboro, and especially so when it will benefit the county just as much as if it was spent outside the city.

The Commissioners do not meet for two weeks and until that time there will be much speculation as to what action they will take.

Chicken Mousse With Peas.

Chop enough cooked chicken meat, free from skin and bone, to make two cupfuls and pound to a paste; add one and one-half cupfuls of rich cream sauce and press all through a sieve. Season with salt, pepper and one tablespoonful of lemon juice; then add the beaten yolks of four eggs and blend, beating thoroughly with a wooden spoon. Fold in the whites of the eggs, beaten stiff and dry, and turn the mixture into a buttered mold; place on several thicknesses of paper, surround with hot water, cover with buttered paper and bake until firm in center. Remove from mold to a hot serving dish and pour hot buttered peas around it. Serve with a rich cream sauce.—Harper's Bazar.

Kidney Diseases Are Curable

COTTON CROP EARLIER THAN IT WAS LAST YEAR.

Memphis, Tenn., July 24.—The Commercial-Appeal says:

"The cotton crop developed in a normal way during the week in the Carolinas, Georgia and all States west of the Mississippi river and in Tennessee. In Mississippi and Alabama there are complaints of excessive rainfall but damage appears to have been slight and such as will be early overcome with fair weather. The plant has grown quite rapidly but generally is taking on fruit also. Continued excess of rainfall might cause excessive growth at the expense of fruitage, so dry weather east of the Mississippi river is desirable. General and copious rains have caused a marked revival in the plant in Texas and Oklahoma and the outlook is decidedly more promising. Sufficient rain for the present has fallen in these States. Boll weevil damage is very slight, although many corespondents note the warm moist weather is quite favorable to their increase. The cotton plant is nearly perfect attained good size and is very healthy. Cultivation is nearly perfect and fields are clean except in limited localities where the rainfall has retarded cultivation for several weeks. Crop is much earlier than last year and appears to be somewhat ahead of an average in advancement."

His preaching is on a high plane and much interest is manifested in the revival. The singing is being conducted by Prof. J. H. Smith, of Durham.

Wake Assessments Were Not Satisfactory.

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, July 24.—The Wake County Board of Equalization is in session here this week undertaking to hear the complaints against the tax assessments on real estate that have been made by the county and township assessors. It will take several days to accord all the hearings. The indications are that there will be quite a number of modifications, especially in the value of farm lands expected to be made, the estimate being that the final increase in property valuation through the raising of assessments will be around $3,000,000. Farmlands in some sections of the county have been raised to forty dollars per acre and this, it is argued, is entirely too high and out of proportion to the assessments made in other sections of the State.

WILL DIVIDE PIE FAIRLY

New Machine Invented Which Will Cut It Into Six Equal Pieces.

No more will the restaurant Romeos wrangle because Florence, the belle of pie jugglers, shows partiality. A heartless machine has been invented that insures peace in the lunch counters of America by dividing every pie into six equal parts with a mathematical precision that admits of no dispute. The machine consists of a plate with a jointed handle curving over it. Depending from the handle are six knives, arranged like the spokes of a wheel, on a spring device, which gives resiliency to the stroke. The pie is placed on the plate of the machine and the handle pressed down. The knives divide the pie into six pieces at one blow and not only cuts each piece exactly the same size, but saves the time required to divide the pie with an ordinary knife. Hotels and restaurants will find one of these implements indispensable.

Southern Cake.

One and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful butter (scant), three-quarter cupful of milk, whites of three or four eggs, two heaping spoonfuls of baking powder, about two cupfuls of flour, sifted four times, vanilla. Filling—One cupful of brown sugar, one cupful of white sugar, one cupful of milk, butter size of a walnut. Boil all together (add butter when nearly done) until it forms a soft ball in water. Take from the fire and add one teaspoonful of vanilla, one teaspoonful of lemon, chopped raisins, cherries (candied), citron, and pecan nuts. Beat until creamy, and spread between the layers and on top.

Do You Read the WANT ADS?

Have you found out what interesting news is contained in the want page? There is a reason why want ads are interesting to everybody. Supply and demand create a market. The man who has an article which he has no further use for, with the assistance of a little want ad, can find readily the other man who is looking for just that article. On the other hand the man who is looking for some particular article can find the man who has it and who it perhaps has not occurred that he can sell it, thus by means of the want ad purchasers and sellers for small articles get together.

Try a Want Ad in The Telegram, it makes no difference what you want, tell it here.

HE was named Frederick Sleigh Roberts, and he kept that name, with various military prefixes, until he was made a baron in 1892, which made him Sir Frederick. In 1901 he was made the first earl of Kandahar, Pretoria and Waterford, getting his title partly from his services in Afghanistan and partly from the fact that his family has long been identified with Waterford. But to the soldiers who have served with him and who love him he is "Bobs," and as such he will live in army memories. Born at Cawnpore, India, Sept. 30, 1832, Lord Roberts has been in military life since he was a young man, rising successively through the various ranks from lieutenant to field marshal. He was commander of the forces in India from 1885 until 1893 and later was in command of the forces in Ireland. His history is practically a history of English military operations in India. He participated in the siege of Delhi and was wounded there, and he was a prominent figure in the relief of Lucknow. He was commander in chief in Africa in 1899 and 1900, in which campaign he relieved Kimberly and captured General Cronje. For this he was thanked by both houses of parliament. Honors have been heaped on him, and he has nearly all the letters of the alphabet tacked after his name. But to the soldiers he is "Bobs," and it was by this endearing diminutive that he was greeted every time he appeared in public during the coronation of King George. He is quite small, his head being only as high as King George's shoulders, but many times he received more applause than the ruler. In the picture Lord Roberts is in civilian dress.

MAKES PRETTY PILLOW COVER

Large Linen Handkerchief, Tastefully Embroidered, as Good as Anything That Can Be Employed.

Some of the prettiest cases for tiny cushions, which dainty women like to tuck under their heads when lying down, are made from large linen handkerchiefs. The work required is regarded as fancy work, it being such fine sewing that it can be picked up at any time in the evening, and is not bulky to carry from place to place.

The handkerchiefs may vary in size from 12 to 22 inches, depending upon the cushion to be used. It is well to have the latter at least one inch smaller than the case.

An extremely pretty and serviceable size is 14 inches for the pillow, using a 15-inch handkerchief. The latter is quite out of style now, though it is still sold. In consequence there may be found in old trunks some old handkerchiefs which are exquisitely embroidered, and these make beautiful cases. They may have also the owner's monogram or cipher, and if a woman does not embroider she can have them worked to order. They are better in one corner, as they make a roughness against which the face may sometimes rub. If they are put in the center the letters should be at least an inch and a half long.

When the handkerchiefs are not embroidered and have merely a hemstitched edge the monogram or cipher should be large in order to be sufficiently decorative.

In making the case the narrowest muslin beading is required. It is overhanded on the edge, except on the fourth side. This part of the square is left wholly open to admit the entrance of the pillow. The second handkerchief is overhanded to the beading, and the case is complete, save for the fastenings.

There are two lace buttons, evenly placed and sewed inside the open hem one inch from the edge. Two coarse thread loops are made directly opposite and these, when fastened, hold the pillow in, yet it is easily removed when the outside requires laundering.

STRICTLY UP TO DATE.

For this costume spotted and plain Viyella are used, tucks are made at front and back, and pieces of plain material are taken from neck over shoulder to elbow, where they are finished off in points, a double row of stitching secures them; strips are also taken down front and back, and the cuffs and collar are to match.

Hat of black straw, trimmed with a long quill.

Materials required: Two yards spotted Viyella and ⅛ yard plain 32 inches wide.

Coats for Summer.

White is to be fashionable this summer, and nothing is prettier than a white cloak. White satin evening cloaks faced with black are smart but are not practical as compared with the same style of coat in lightweight cloth. These coats should be cut on some loose model, and can be trimmed or plain. The sailor collar and revers of velvet covered with heavy lace are effective, but they are equally effective of plain velvet, and velvet for the moment seems more in favor than satin as trimming. Heavy embroidery and braiding around the bottom of the coats, with the same trimming repeated on the wide turned-back cuffs and sailor collar, make the garment most elaborate. Sometimes the revers are faced with satin, not velvet, and this obviates the too heavy effect of too much braiding and embroidery, which always looks stiff.—Harper's Bazar.

TAFT'S ARBITRATION PLANS SCORE SUCCESS

United States and England Have Practically Agreed Upon Treaty—President Has Succeeded in Undertaking Regarded By Many as Impossible.

By VICTOR ELLIOTT.

Washington, July 24.—When President Taft announced that the United States and Great Britain had practically agreed upon the terms of the arbitration treaty, it was realized at once that the most important step in history looking toward world-wide peace, had been taken.

It is now a question for Congress to consider. Within a few weeks, or perhaps a few days, the administration will have the convention ready to submit to the United States Senate. There is every reason to believe that it will be sent to that body for ratification during the present extra session of Congress.

Only a few minor differences remain to be settled between the negotiators. These are so unimportant in their bearing that neither government regards them as obstacles to the signing of the treaty. The only reason they are not disposed of now is that Ambassador Brice, who is conducting the negotiations on the part of his government, has found it necessary to submit the present draft to his Foreign Office for approval.

All the important considerations have been agreed upon. That provision in the treaty which preserved the full constitutional rights of the United States Senate, has found no objection on the part of England. And then, of course, the issues which it is proposed to arbitrate have been stipulated and accepted by both governments.

After all, these issues were the great and far-reaching objects of President Taft's arbitration policy. He was bold enough to propose to another great power that it and the United Statts settle their questions of national honor and of territory without resort to arms.

Since civilization began these two questions have been regarded as unarbitrable. To infringe upon the territory of another nation meant war. To insult another's national pride meant a fight. Any other questions than these two could become matters of negotiation. They could be settled, perhaps, by the good offices of a third power, but never had it been regarded as possible for national honor or territory to be protected by other than violent means.

This is what makes the Taft policy remarkable. This is why half the nations of the earth gasped when he proposed it. This is what caused wise men in Congress to shake their heads when they first read about the executive's remarkable proposition.

But a change has come over the uncomprehending within the past year. Instead of this arbitration plan of the President's being a dream, it is about to become a fact. Nations which scornfully wondered in the beginning are sending their ambassadors and ministers to the State Department for copies of the arbitration draft, as proposed. They are sending these copies to their governments.

These same wise men in Congress are beginning to wonder if, after all, this dream might not come true. Some of them are even priming themselves to discuss the treaty upon the floor of the house and senate, and send copies of their addresses back to their states for consumption. They are beginning to realize that this kind of literature would make good reading, and that the attitude of champion of world peace, would be a fine attitude to assume with the conservative voters back in their districts.

All this has come about through the favorable responses to President Taft's plan, on the part of two of the most powerful nations on the globe. Great Britain and France are actually negotiating arbitration treaties with the United States. The negotiations have now reached such a stage that failure seems out of the question.

This is why the world has turned its eyes toward Washington in the fervent hope that movement here may end war and armaments. That is why people are crossing the Atlantic Ocean just to tell President Taft that their friends, or neighbors or associates in England, are trusting that the two peoples may be united in a pact that will forever prevent warfare between them.

Of course, all is not over. The negotiations are practically ended, but then there is the senate to consult. That august body must ratify every treaty before it can go into effect. And while there have been no expressions heard so far from the upper house of Congress in opposition to the treaty, the action of this body in the end cannot be foreseen.

There is in the convention one important proviso. This was insisted upon by the United States before the negotiations with Great Britain were ever begun. This proviso preserves to the United States Senate every right in foreign affairs with which the constitution endowed it. That is, no decision of the arbitral board under the proposed treaty may become effective without the consent of the senate.

It was intimated in the beginning of the negotiations that the actions of the arbitration board in all matters submitted to it consideration were to become effective automatically. In other words, if the board said that the United States had to pay $100,000,000 indemnity to Great Britain for some damage, that ended it—both countries were bound to abide by the decision.

This is a misconception. The treaty provides that all decisions of the board, before they become operative with regard to the United States, must be approved by the senate. Under the constitution, the senate is the court of last appeal on all treaties, and it was obvious to the President and the Secretary of State that the senate would consent to no treaty which legislated away its constitutional power.

This proviso leads the administration to hope that no serious opposition to the treaty will arise in the senate during the consideration of the matter.

Escaped With His Life.

"Twenty-one years ago I faced an awful death," writes H. B. Martin, Port Harrelson, S. C. "Doctors said I had consumption and the dreadful cough I had looked like it, sure enough. I tried everything I could hear of, for my cough, and was under the treatment of the best doctor in Georgetown, S. C., for a year, but could get no relief. A friend advised me to try Dr. King's New Discovery. I did so, and was completely cured. I feel that I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure." Its positively guaranteed for coughs, colds, and all bronchial affections. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free at Fariss Klutz Drug Co.

NEAT EFFECTS IN NEGLIGEE

Timely Suggestions for Wedding Gifts Easily Made by Those Skilled in Needlework.

A negligee that will make a wedding gift is a loose kimono, reaching below the waist and held to the figure by ribbons drawn through eyelets at side seams.

Persian lawn or Paris muslin is serviceable, the edge finished with a German Valenciennes an inch wide.

A rayed disk design is drawn as a border around the neck and down each side of the fronts; it may outline the entire negligee. These are worked alternately in warm pink and deep baby blue, the straight rays running from a center of five French knots in black or sometimes from an outline the color of the rays with the black knots inside.

A finish is given by adding to the outside edge a quarter-inch blue ribbon sewed on with machine stitch in black and on the under side a pink ribbon that extends beyond the blue. Satin ribbon is effective, but washes badly.

Narrow Dutch Collars Now.

Rather narrower are the new Dutch collars and very dainty in style as well. Real lace as well as the best imitations, also hand-embroidered batiste in both ecru and white, is used in making these becoming accessories.

Small, simply made bows are worn with these collars and these are made either of a material matching the gown, or of silk of a contrasting shade.

BORDURE FOULARDS NOT EASY FOR ORDINARY DRESSMAKER.

Beautiful Effects Are Produced in Hands of Skillful Seamstress—Season's Models Less Attractive Than Other Utility Gowns.

On the whole the foulard models this season are rather less attractive than some of the other general utility frocks, but one sees many that are practical and pretty, the best being as a rule combined with plain one tone silk. A large proportion of the foulards have borders, and borders, while often beautiful, are never easy for the ordinary dressmaker to handle. Perhaps that is why so many of the season's foulard models leave much to be desired.

Successfully handled, the bordure foulards make up very smartly and the knowing makers do not hesitate to cut the border off and apply it wherever it can be used to better purpose in that way. A very simple dark blue and white foulard model had its deep brocade border utilized only on the bottom of the tunic, while the bodice trimming was of white embroidery.

The vivid colorings which this season is displaying are undoubtedly better in one tone or changeable colorings and in veiled effects than in the figured silks, and that is another reason why many of the foulards look hot and garish, but in white and black and in blue and white foulard is an indispensable summer standby for many women, and there are some foulards with dark grounds and very narrow line stripes of color which make up charmingly for one piece trotting frocks.

Enormous amounts of etamine of very fine voile and of chiffon are being used for everything from street frocks to evening frocks, usually in combination with plain silk of some sort, and a very lovely sheer stuff, known as satin voile meteore, is much liked for dressy uses. It is a very sheer silk voile with satin finish, often changeable in coloring, and anything lovelier in texture and coloring it would be hard to imagine.

Delicate pink, changing to lilac; blue, melting into lavender; soft yellow, changing to faint green; deeper harmonies of fuchsia pink and purple, king blue, and green—these are some of the color schemes, and one may have the material, too, in one tone tints of great variety.

The changeable idea enters, too, into some delightful, figured, sheer stuffs. A wonderfully chic little frock of marked simplicity, aside from its material, is of a sheer material, chiffon or mousseline, we do not remember which, for the color was the thing that impressed one. It was shot with three colors—a soft green, a blue as soft, and a light yellowish brown—and scattered over this ground were large black dots. With every movement of the folds, with every ray of light, the color changed and shifted, but it was never anything save harmoniously subdued.

There was a little black satin about the foot of the softly fulled skirt, the high waist line, and the cuffs. The neck was finished by a Dutch collar of beautiful muslin in yellowed antique embroidery. That was all, and a more delectable little frock for certain purposes has not been seen this season.

SERGE STREET SUIT

Paquin suit of dark blue serge. The overskirt opens on one side, disclosing dark blue and white striped linen band, edging skirt all around. The lapels are also of the linen as is the band edging the sleeves. The brass ball buttons fasten the cutaway jacket on one side and are finished with a design embroidered on the serge.

Sanitary Slippers.

There are new bath slippers which are sanitary if not artistic. They are made of raffia, lined with blue or pink crash, and when soiled can be scrubbed inside and out and put in the sun to dry.

Planning the House

When the Bingstons started in to build their house they engaged in the enterprise in a blithesome and trustful spirit.

They knew precisely what they wanted. In one evening they drew a rough design of the four rooms downstairs and the four rooms upstairs and indicated the porches. Really, all there was left for the architect to do, as Mrs. Bingston happily remarked, was to transfer it to blue print paper, which seemed the proper thing when one built a house. He would also have to put down the measurements and decide on the outside and room and the material and the construction and the proportions, and figure out the resistance of the beams and the floors and the cement and concrete, and make detailed drawings of nearly every inch of it, besides wrestling with contractors and plumbers and electricians and labor unions.

"Why, it won't take any time at all!" Mrs. Bingston said. "But don't you think it would be awfully nice to have a sleeping porch?"

"We could stick one in right here," agreed Bingston, making a dab with his pencil. "And, say! I wonder if there couldn't be a billiard room in the basement!"

Langston, next door, dropped in as they were working.

"What you want," he said, interestedly, "is a pergola! They're swell! Out in California you never see a house that pretends to be a house without a pergola—nifty place to fix up with chairs and tables and things!"

"But it rains here," objected Mrs. Bingston.

Langston coughed. "Or," he went on hastily, "you could have a sunken garden. Oh, you must have a sunken garden!"

"I trust, Henry," said Bingston's father when he saw the sketch, "that you will not follow convention like a blind sheep. Put up something different from the common run. Now, if you would spread these rooms around this way you could introduce an interior court—novel, eh? I shall never forget the courtyards of the houses when I was in Spain, with their fountains and lemon trees and clambering roses and the sun—"

"Lemon trees in Chicago?" murmured his son. "And when that courtyard gets chockful of snow in January—"

"Are you merely a commercialized automaton!" ejaculated Bingston's father. "You've no poetry in your soul! Anyhow, I'd twist the dining room around here and introduce a music room half way up the stairs."

Mrs. Bingston's rich aunt put on her glasses and studied the sketch which her niece showed her. "You don't want that kind of a house at all!" she announced, decisively. There is nothing so satisfying as the old colonial with a broad hall in the middle and big rooms on either side, making a handsome frontage. Letitia, I shall draw up a plan for you."

"Campbell says," reported Bingston one evening, "that we'll get mortally sick of a front porch, where every one can run in on us, but with a lot only sixty feet wide—"

"Sister Mabel was over today," interrupted his wife. "And went right up in the air because we hadn't arranged for a sunken tub in the bathroom. I told her it would have to sink through the ceiling down into the living room if it sank at all, but she said the architect could fix it somehow. Also she said I simply must have a dressing-room!"

Bingston arose and pounded the table. "Say!" he cried, "I'm going to have a pipe dream, too! I'm going to buy a hill and build the house on the exact top in the shape of an old-fashioned beehive! Then I'm going to tunnel an entrance from the bottom straight up through the middle of the hill and run an elevator into the the interior of the house, where all the rooms will be arranged around corridors in circles, with windows like portholes looking out on the world from the sides of the beehive. We shall be absolutely impregnable from the outside, because I shall level off the sides of the hill till it is like a rounded cone.

"At the bottom where the elevator starts up the vertical tunnel I shall harness three bulldogs that gnash their teeth with the regularity of a clock, an automatic gun that shoots once a minute and a boiling vat of water with a springboard to hurl into its depths anybody who doesn't know the combination. Then I'll sit up above and defy all these meddlesome relatives and friends of ours who have ideas on building houses."

"Why, Henry," gasped his wife. "Still, I don't know that I blame you! Why can't we stick to our original plan of four rooms down and four rooms up?"

"That," said Bingston, "is quite the brightest idea yet!"

A Closed Incident.

"You have said that you were going to resign."

"Yes," replied the South American president. "And that ends the matter. I'd like to see anybody either deny it or make me prove it."

A Pessimist.

"Some one has said that you cannot throw a stone in Indiana without hitting a poet or a novelist."

"I know, but there is a law there against throwing stones."

HUNDRED THOUSAND CLUB CLOSES ITS ANNUAL SESSION

Wilmington, July 23.—The final business session of the second annual convention of the One Hundred Thousand Dolar Club, composed of the agents of the Security Life and Annuity Company, of Greensboro, who sell insurance to the amount of $100,000 or more a year, was held in the Seashore Hotel, Wrightesville Beach, yesterday morning at 11:30.

At the session yesterday officers for the ensuing year were elected and speeches were made by a number present. G. H. Dortch, of Raleigh, was elected president; W. D. Frierson, of Sumter, S. C., vice president, and G. A. Rankin, of Macon, Ga., was re-elected secretary.

G. H. Dortch, the newly elected president made an excellent talk on the "Real Agent." His remarks were heard with interest. Following Mr. Dortch, George A. Grimsley, secretary of the Security Life and Annuity, told "How to Keep Business on the Books." W. P. Upshur, general agent for South Carolina, of Sumter, S. C., spoke on "The Company." "How to Get an Interview," was the subject of R. P. Keetchum, general agent at Cordele, Ga., and P. C. Thomas, of Turner & Thomas, general agents at Hawkinsville, Ga., discussed the "Mistake Many Agents Make in Neglecting the $1,000 Prospect." There were also a number of short talks by other members present. All of the speeches were of real merit and the interchange of experiences and theories brought out are expected to be of much value to the agents in their work.

Present at the meeting were the following, representing five Southern States: From North Carolina, P. P. Yates, G. H. Dortch, J. L. Wimbush, G. A. Grimsley, C. C. Taylor, F. E. Sloan, M. M. Murchison; from South Carolina, H. V. Frierson, W. D. Frierson, G. H. Lenior, W. B. Upshur, L. R. Trueluck, L. J. MacKay, W. E. Durant; from Georgia, G. A. Thomas, P. C. Thomas, S. W. Turner, L. T. Brown, P. P. Ketchum; from Florida, C. D. Laundon, D. C. Ketchum, R. M. Robinson. R. L. Harper and A. M. Potter, of Virginia, are members of the club but were not able to attend the meeting this year. Several other agents of the company, who have only been with it a short time and thus have not qualified as members of the club as yet, were present at the convention, these being L. M. McMillan and J. J. Kolb, of South Carolina.

Complimentary to the occasion the club Friday presented to the company over $250,000 in new business, most of which was written the preceding week. The One Hundred Thousand Dollar Club is a comparatively new organization, last year being the first time that it held an anual convention, but the members are "live wires," as one of the company officials expressed it. At the present they have written this year over $1,500,000 insurance more than the amount writen up to this time last year.

The Security Life and Annuity Company is now ten years old. It has in force business to the amount of $15,000,000 and assets of nearly $1,500,000.

The One Hundred Thousand Dollar Club, will very likely meet at Wrightsville Beach again next year. The company gives the club this annual outing complimentary.—Wilmington Star.

AN AUTOMATIC COFFEE POT

Housewife Need Only Provide Material, Light the Lamp, and Her Work Is Done.

This coffee pot, the invention of a Parisian, is absolutely automatic. The ground coffee is placed in the pot with the required amount of water and the wick of the alcohol lamp is lighted. When the coffee is sufficiently boiled it pours itself into the cups. The coffee is placed in a perforated box in the lid of the pot. A tube runs from the coffee box to the bottom of the pot, and the water, on boiling, mounts this tube and circulates through the coffee. The liquid then passes into another tube which carries it to the cups. The alcohol lamp is automatically extinguished the moment the coffee is sufficiently boiled.—Popular Mechanics.

Boiling Time.

Potatoes, 30 minutes, unless small, when rather less; cabbage and cauliflower, 25 minutes; peas and asparagus, 20 to 25 minutes; carrots and turnips, 45 minutes when young, 1 hour in winter; onions, medium size, one hour; beets, 1 hour in summer, 1 hour and 30 minutes or 2 hours (if large) in winter; French beans, if slit or sliced slantwise and thin, 20 minutes, if only snapped across, 40 minutes; broad beans, if very young, 30 minutes, old, 40 to 45 minutes. All vegetables should be put in fast-boiling water and quickly brought to the boiling point again, not left to stew in hot water before boiling, which toughens them and destroys color and flavor. This time-table will be found useful if copied and fastened on the kitchen wall.—New York Press.

ST. JAMES PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH DEDICATED SUNDAY

The congregation of the St. James Presbyterian church went into their new building on North Forbis street Sunday. Three services were held during the day, all of which were attended by large and appreciative audiences.

Rev. Abner Graham, D. D., pastor of the Church Street Presbyterian church, Charlotte, preached at 11 o'clock. The sermon was timely, and pleasing to the people. Dr. Graham has a splendid record as a church builder among his people. His subject was "Casting Four Anchors," based upon Acts 22:29.

The dedicatory service proper was held in the afternoon at three o'clock. Rev. Dr. Melton Clark, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, preached the sermon, and conducted the further dedicatory exercises. The sermon was soul-stirring and full of the speaker's characteristic earnestness. He paid a high tribute to the work of the congregation of the church, spoke of some of the ripe fruits produced by the Presbyterian creed in the lives of different people, and thought it well-fitted for the uplift and salvation of the negro.

He drew on the canvass of imagination the picture of a man, produced by the Calvanistic Creed. This was a man of conviction, independent thought, simplicity of life, and piety. He told the people what Presbyterianism had done in Scotland, and in this country.

The pastor of the church, Rev. J. G. Walker, presented the keys of the building on behalf of the building committee, to R. S. Alexander, chairman of the Board of Trustees.

This is one of the prettiest negro church edifices in the city. The pews of the old building which was rolled back, are used as temporary seats. The lighting fixtures had been ordered but did not reach here in time for use on this occasion. Arrangements have been made for a splendid and brilliant lighting service. The offering for the day amounted to $142.

"DEACON" WON OUT IN TWELVE-INNING CONTEST YESTERDAY

Brought in Three Runs With Timely Singles and Scored the Deciding Tally Himself — Game Close and Exciting Throughout.

Deacon Morrisey "won his own game," to use the expression from the grand stand, in the opening game with Charlotte yesterday. He batted in three runs for the Patriots and himself made the tally that brought to an end the exciting 12-inning slugging match. The score was: Charlotte, 3; Greensboro, 4.

Sheesley was the Deacon's opponent on the mound, and both pitched a fair grade of ball, allowing an average of only about one hit to an inning. Neither man walked anybody; but each hit one batter with a pitched ball. Both were effective in several tight places and quite a number of runners died on third during the game.

Charlotte got the first run in the opening frame when McMillan led off with a single, was sacrificed to second and scored on Cross's single. Malcolmson made another run in the fifth, when he started of with a double and scored on McMillan's hit. In Greensboro's half of the fifth, the Patriots tied up the score. Lowman and Carroll started off with singles and were sacrificed to second and third by Stuart. Then the Deacon sent a Texas leaguer over Garman's head, just inside the foul line, scoring the two runners ahead of him.

In the seventh the locals added another run. Carroll leading off with a hit, Stuart sacrificing and Carroll scoring on the Deacon's single. Winston added another run in the eighth as a result of hits by Garman, Wofford and Coutts.

With the score tied, the game rocked along until the 12th inning. Men could get as far as third, but the pitchers would allow them no farther. In the twelfth Morrisey hit a hot one to Cross, who threw wild to first, Morrisey going to second. A wild pitch and the Deacon was camping on third sack. Rickard drove the horsehide to centerfield, and Morrisey scored on the throw in.

Wilkinson had two close decisions at the plate. The first was in the eighth inning, when he called Rickard out, and the last in the twelfth when he called Morrisey safe. The spectators were of the opinion that if he had reversed his rulings he would have been nearer right.

The game was featured by the timely hitting of Lowman and Morrisey for the locals, the hitting of McMillan, Garman and Cross for the visitors and the fielding of Garman, Doak, Carroll and Doyle.

PRETTY BUT ONE-SIDED GAME WON BY SPARTANBURG

Spartanburg, S. C., July 24.—Though the game was rather one-sided it was prettily played by both sides and was the fastest game of the season on the local diamond, lasting but one hour and fifteen minutes. Ferrell allowed but few hits and kept these well scattered while practically every hit off Trammell were opportune and a large number of the runs were made off comparatively few hits. The visitors' run was made in the first off a pass, a sacrifice and a double. The locals were invincible after that.

WINSTON-GREENVILLE GAME RAINED OUT; A DOUBLE TODAY

Greenville, S. C., July 24.—The Winston-Greenville game was rained out in the beginning of the fifth inning and does not count in the percentage. A double-header will be played tomorrow. Six hits and five runs were made in the first by Winston off Ridgeway. In the fourth former manager, now third baseman, Dick Smith, got the longest home run of the season here, just following a two-bagger. The ball went some forty feet over left field fence. Final score 6 to 2 in favor of Winston. No score.

DIAMOND DUST

First of three straights.

They say now Coffin will hardly return.

Wonder if Miller will not want his vacation right away.

Winston is respectfully asked to move on, or get to one side.

We have it "from a good source" that they want more detailed reports in the Twin City.

The "heavy-end" of our batting list is in a different place from where it is on other teams.

The run-getting combination of the Patriots at present is around the place where Lowman, Carroll, Stuart and sometimes the Deacon are.

It is almost sacreligious to instruct Carroll to bunt, when he is such a good hitter. We hope there will be more of these nigh-tragedies.

Another Jonah of the Greensboro team was downed by the Deacon, who by the way is somewhat of a Jonah-slayer anyway, come to think of it.

Wilkinson's decision when Morrisey scored in the last inning may have been wrong, but it looked to us as if it were very, very close, and might have been called either way.

Sheesley is like Swindell in one respect at least; a little noise from the grandstand will rattle him so that the rest is easy. He's not as good a pitcher as Swindell, however.

For our part, we are rather sore on bunting, especially when the bunter is not a good one. Stuart or Doyle can do it successfully, and there are others on the team who can, but when a man is a good hitter it leaves a bad taste in the mouth to see him attempt a bunt and get into triple and double plays.

If anybody is of the opinion that Charlotte hasn't a good ball team, he has another think coming to him. These three games will be every bit as interesting as those with Winston, and means just as much to the Patriots to get them. Lovers of the sport should get out and witness the games. They are worth the time and price.

Triturated Baseball.

Charlotte Chronicle.

Let's see, when did the Twins win their last game?

"Salary limit" didn't figure much in the games at Greensboro last week.

Doyle used the steam roller process in the last series, and the Twins were the victims.

"Rabbit" Doyle is about the happiest man on the whole team over the three-times defeat of the Twins.

Clancy hasn't begun to lose sleep yet but he's on the verge of a prolonged case of insomnia.

Greensboro has forgotten that any games were played on and about the Fourth of July.

If Winston and Greensboro could play at home all the time there would be no cry of losing money on the attendance.

Coffin selected a mighty good time to take his vacation to avoid making some awkward explanations about the team losing four straight.

An even break with Greensboro and Winston this week will be going mighty good, and a majority for the locals will be more than could be expected.

Sure hope the Patriot pitchers have worked the victories out on Winston and will at least let us have a look-in on the series.
